

ASHABHUMI ONGOING JOURNEY

Evening view from Ashabumi farm

From nursery to agroforestry practice in the community

Through the Greenhouse Nursery, established by Ashabumi Nepal, our organization has started distributing fruit saplings and vegetable seeds in the community.

Our project From Nursery to Agroforestry Practices is an extension of this project as we plan to grow 3000 fruit saplings yearly, to support the community as well as make a community forest into a fruit forest for wildlife as well to decrease human and wildlife conflict mainly with monkeys. Our goal is to enhance local biodiversity and promote sustainable land use, benefiting both the environment and community livelihoods. We plan to extend our project from Aarukharka and also in Palpa as the problem remains the same throughout Nepal.

Sowing hope :Empowering youth in organic farming

Ashabhumi Nepal is gathering resources to conduct the Showing Hope project whose main purpose is to provide organic farming training to small-scale farmers, women's groups, youth and the community. We want to address the issue of chemical farming and low productivity. This training will take place in different rural communities before the end of 2024

Ashabhumi Nepal to work with Local Change-Maker to Develop Organic Farmstay & Learning Center in Palpa

Ashabhumi Nepal is working together with Sunil, who shares a common vision and passion for empowering youth in the farming sector and promoting simple living in his home area

Despite his success in the finance sector, Sunil felt a deep connection to his roots and the natural environment of his birthplace. This inspired him to make a significant career shift, embracing permaculture. Returning to the mid-mountains of Nepal, he now dedicates his efforts to promoting sustainable farming practices, aiming to improve local livelihoods and foster environmental stewardship in his community.

Sunil recently purchased 3.5 acres of land, where he is growing a variety of fruits, vegetables, and herbs. Ashabhumi Nepal will work together with Sunil in his initiative by helping to establish a nursery, promote cultivation on barren lands, and develop a rural homestay that offers guests a chance to experience the simplicity of farm life. We will also provide organic farming training to empower the local community and inspire young farmers.

Ashabhumi Nepal collaboration with UNFAO, Nepal

Ashabhumi founder Krishna met Ken Shimizu , Director of the UNFAO (Food and Agriculture Organization) in Nepal, along with other officials. We discussed potential collaboration between our organization, Ashabhumi Nepal, and FAO Nepal to empower farmers through organic farming.

The FAO Office in Nepal has expressed a positive outlook on providing us with technical and financial support wherever possible. We are excited about the prospect of increasing our impact. We will soon be providing a training program to serve farmers and youth in rural communities through agroforestry technique and are gathering resources.

Ashabhumi Nepal interaction with different rural communities across Nepal

At Ashabhumi, we're dedicated to more than just farming—we're about growing communities. As we connect with various regions in Nepal, we hear firsthand the stories and challenges of grassroots rural communities. Farming is their livelihood, yet many still struggle to meet their basic needs.

Ashabhumi Nepal was born to bring hope and support to these underserved communities through agricultural training and livelihood programs. We are just beginning and a long way to go. We have a farm stay as well to engage with rural communities and experience simplicity and rural living.

Happy to share some moments of our engagement with these communities, highlighting the impact and connections we've made along the way.

Join us in our mission to empower rural communities across Nepal. Together, we can cultivate a brighter and sustainable future.
