OUR RECENT ACTIVITIES

1

Ashabhumi Model farm and learning center

After more than two years of working closely with the community, learning with them and from them, we have now taken the first steps toward a long-held dream: the Ashabhumi Farm and Learning Center.

This space is envisioned as a living classroom that brings together a community garden, seed bank, and integrated elements of permaculture and agroforestry. The goal is not only to grow food, but also to grow knowledge, resilience, and local capacity.

We have already begun preparing the land and are at the designing phase with different elements of the farm, using sustainable resources. This will require time, patience, and resources, so we are moving step by step, building slowly and mindfully. We trust that with collective effort, learning, and continued community support, this vision will take shape.

We warmly welcome suggestions, guidance, and support as we move forward on this journey. This is just the beginning and we are excited to walk this path together.

This past year has been a journey of small steps—growing our nursery, learning together with farmers, and beginning the Ashabhumi Learning Center. None of this would be possible without the trust and care of our community, friends, and partners.

We move into the new year with hope, humility, and commitment to continue working with the land and the people who depend on it.

Wishing you good health, peace, and a meaningful year ahead.
